The National Board of Accountants and Auditors (NBAA) is a regulatory body for the accountancy profession in Tanzania. Its key role is to regulate practices and advocate for new developments in the accountancy profession, which is vital for promoting accountability and public confidence, and therefore support economic growth. Through its Accountancy Journal (AJ), the Board provides a crucial platform for disseminating knowledge, and promoting advancements in the accountancy profession. It provides a space for members to share their research findings, learn from each other, and stay abreast of the latest trends and innovations.

The accountancy profession is responsive to changes in business operating environment and technological advancements, which demands for new developments in accounting standards, policies, pronouncements and guidance to practitioners. The adoption and implementation of the new practices necessitate conducting of research to gain practical insight that will inform policy developments. Therefore, through this call for research papers, the board invites academicians, practitioners and other stakeholders to submit manuscripts from applied researches, case studies and practical based research which are relevant to the scope of the journal, for publication consideration in the next issue of the AJ in January 2026.

The indicative areas defined in the scope of the journal are Accounting, auditing, taxation, management accounting, business management, ethics, governance, financial reporting (including integrated and sustainability), risk management, current issues facing the profession and any other issues of interest to stakeholders of accountancy profession. For this call, authors should consider drafting their manuscripts to cover wider practical issues including but not limited to:

- standard setting, exposure drafts, adoption, implementation and impact of local and international financial reporting standards
- governance, risk management and ethical issues
- technological developments including artificial intelligence and block chain
- Integrated and sustainability reporting requirements.

By publishing papers through AJ, the authors' research output will be shared to a wider accountancy profession community without paying for publication fee. In addition, the AJ offers award for the best paper that provides critical insight to the accountancy profession.

Please submit your manuscripts through the following email accountantjournal@nbaa.go.tz.

Author guideline of the journal can be found on NBAA website www.nbaa.go.tz
